Peering into the recent show Oppler at Transmitter (Photo: Transmitter)

This art collective focuses on international multidisciplinary and experimental works. A recent highlight is the group show Oppler, which features paintings, sculptures and a site-specific installation that plays with the viewer's gaze and how art can manipulate it. This theme is expressed through a wide range of styles including op art, minimalism, kinetic art and color field painting. The installation is also part of a larger project Transmitter is doing on the Doppler effect (the observer's relation to the relativity of sound wave frequency).
